June is Men's Health Month. Bill MacCormick talks to Dr. Sal Giorgianni, Science Director of The Men's Health Network, about three groups of men at highest risk of prostate cancer: Blacks, men with a family history of the disease, and Vietnam War veterans – especially those exposed to Agent Orange. This is a timely interview because The US Preventative Services Task Force, which advises the federal government on health matters, has just eliminated government insurance coverage for PSA testing for prostate cancer. Dr. Giorgianni says it's time to call congress.
